U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS, Mary Frances Berry, Chairwoman: "Voting is the language of our democracy," Berry said. "And, regrettably, when it mattered most on Election Day, real people lost real opportunities to speak truth to power at the ballot box. Citizens For Legitimate Government™ grew out of other politically activist internet groups. Once it became probable that GW Bush would be the supposed "legal"--though, in terms of democratic standards, by no means legitimate--president of the United States, we began to focus on strategies for countering the attempt on the part of the administration, in conjunction with the media, to create the appearance of legitimacy.

It is our belief that GW Bush has taken office by "virtue" of a contingency of GOPers who worked to ensure him, by various means (propaganda, obstruction of justice, voter and vote-counting intimidation, legal delay, specious and biased legal reasoning) the U.S. presidency, as against the will of the people.

We are an activist group established to expose the Bush coup d'etat, making him utterly ineffectual as a putative leader. This effort involves opposing his cabinet choices when appropriate (i.e., in all cases), making spectacular political announcements that remind the public that our president was not elected, supporting and contributing to the voter marches, supporting and contributing to the efforts to investigate fraudulent voting and non-counting practices in Florida, and much, much more.
